User Roles & Permissions

- A robust user role and permission system ensures secure and organized access throughout the platform. The system allows administrators to define roles like Admin, Manager or Support Agent, each with specific access rights.

- Admins have full access to manage products, orders, users, reports, and configurations. Managers might handle inventory and order processing but be restricted from user or system settings.

- Support Agents may only view and respond to customer queries, process refunds, or access specific order-related information. This separation of concerns ensures that team members only access what they need.

- Customers, by default, can register, browse products, add to cart, checkout, and manage their orders or account info, but cannot interfere with administrative functions.

- Permissions are stored and managed centrally, allowing flexibility to create custom roles and assign exact access rights using a permission matrix or system interface.

- Granular control reduces human errors and boosts system security. It also makes it easier to audit user activity and apply changes when the team structure evolves.

- This role-permission framework is also extendable, which means you can integrate third-party apps or future modules with precise access mapping.

- The PC Builder lets users choose parts like CPU, GPU, RAM, and Storage to build a custom PC.
- It filters compatible products as users make selections, avoiding mismatches.
- Users can start fresh or use templates like "Gaming PC" or "Budget Build."
- The system is easy to use, even for beginners, and ensures all parts work together.

Summary, Add to Cart & Upsell

- Once the build is done, a summary shows all parts with prices and total cost.
- Users can save, share, or add the entire build to their cart in one click.
- Smart suggestions offer upgrades, bundles, or better performance parts.
- This helps boost sales and gives users more value from their builds.
